

A joint project involving industry, government and academia for foreign language education in a Japanese high school:
A French language class at Osaka Nishi Municipal High School and Hotel
Plaza Osaka

Yuki TAKEI, Azumi UEDA

A joint project between industry, government and academia involving a language activity such as self-introductions and presentations about the local area by high school students for foreign tourists at a hotel was conducted. Post survey results proved the cultural and educational effectiveness of the project for not only the students, but also the tourists. In the future, such activities would be encouraged with or without the ability to secure public funding or assistance by governmental agencies.
